School Improvement Plan

A significant focus for Stillaguamish Valley Learning Center this year is on instructional improvement with emphasis on group learning strategies for campus classes, curricular and instructional support for home-based learning, and functional intervention plans for students struggling in this alternative setting. Teachers are actively studying together, scheduled to visit each other's classrooms and have collaborative time together for discussing students in need of additional support. Another area of focus in on a mentorship program for new families, an ongoing series of classes to educate parents on subjects such as home-based instructional strategies and child development, and providing multiple ways for families to be involved in school activities. Finally, the changes at SVLC will be captured in a newly revised Family and Student Handbooks.
